Why we're meeting

Over March – May 2026 the catalogue generated €7,273,537 in net sales at a blended CM3 of 12.7% — well below the 19.7% target. The headline gap is concentrated, not spread evenly: a small group of high-revenue, low-margin SKUs is diluting the whole portfolio, while a healthy high-margin core is being under-scaled. This preread frames four product segments and the biggest month-over-month margin movers so Product, Procurement and Marketing can align on where to act first.

Headline takeaways

- The margin drag is concentrated. 23 'low-margin / high-sales' SKUs turn over €1,575,070 (22% of sales) at just -1.0% CM3 — they earn €-16,099 of contribution. Fixing these is the single largest lever.
- The profitable core is solid but small. 20 'high-margin / high-sales' SKUs deliver €340,866 of CM3 at 23.8% — protect price and availability here at all costs.
- There is untapped upside. 20 'high-margin / low-sales' SKUs already run at 26.5% CM3 but only €134,927 of sales — a marketing / merchandising scale opportunity with no margin risk.
- Margins are trending down portfolio-wide. Blended CM3 fell from 13.4% in Mar to 11.6% in May; the bottom-10 decliners (p.4) explain most of the slide.

Margin × Sales matrix

Every SKU is placed in a 3×3 grid: thirds by all-country CM3% (margin) and thirds by all-country net sales (volume). Cells show SKU count, total sales and the segment's blended CM3%.

Tier cut-offs (terciles): margin at 10.2% and 18.6% CM3; sales at €13,708 and €30,660 over the three months.

The four segments to discuss

Each segment lists its five most P&L-relevant SKUs — for the high-margin segments these are the biggest CM3 contributors; for the low-margin segments, the biggest CM3 drains. The prompts are starting points for the room, not fixed actions.

Low margin · High sales

23 SKUs | €1,575,070 sales (22% of total) | blended margin CM1 52.6% › CM2 19.7% › CM3 -1.0%

Biggest lever — high volume at thin or negative margin. Where is the margin going: landed cost, fulfilment, or discount/ad spend? Which of these are structural vs. fixable, and which is volume worth keeping at all?

Low margin · Medium sales

13 SKUs | €282,326 sales (4% of total) | blended margin CM1 60.2% › CM2 26.8% › CM3 -2.1%

Watch list — weak margin before they scale further. Are these on a path to the high-sales / low-margin trap, and what would it take to turn the margin before they grow?

Scale opportunity — strong margin, under-exposed. What is capping demand — visibility, content, availability, price? Where could extra investment pay back given the healthy margin?

Protect — the profit engine of the catalogue. What are the risks to these (price pressure, stock-outs, competitor entry), and how much headroom is there before margin erodes?

Margin trend — biggest movers

Ranked by CM3% change from March to May per SKU (all-country, sales-weighted linear fit), limited to SKUs with at least €10,000 of net sales over the window. CM1% and CM2% are the period-blended levels for context — comparing them with the CM3 trajectory shows whether a move came from COGS (CM1) or from fulfilment / ad cost downstream.
